

DIS/UNITY AND DIFFERENCE

Co-Sponsored by the Center for the Humanities and Faulconer Gallery

Disparities in Pregnancy Outcomes Among Racial Minority Women in the United States

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 2019

PUBLIC TALK: 7:30 P.M.

JOE ROSENFELD '25 CENTER, ROOM 101

Disparities in pregnancy and birth outcomes among racial minority populations are a major public health problem, yet it is difficult to describe the population and its health needs. Professor Karen Tabb Dina will present her findings on maternal characteristics related to adverse birth outcomes and mental health status among self-reported Multiracial women as compared to single race minority and majority women. She will discuss the implications for clinical practice and administrative collection of racial category data.

RECKONING: A ROUNDTABLE DISCUSSION
4 P.M., FAULCONER GALLERY

Professor Tabb Dina will engage in conversations on race, gender, and public health, addressing health disparities and the impact of trauma, including adverse childhood experiences in the setting of the Faulconer Gallery's exhibition, "Reckoning with the Incident" by John Wilson.

KAREN TABB DINA
ASSISTANT PROFESSOR OF SOCIAL WORK,
UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS