Program Notes

“The Pianoforte Sonatas of Beethoven must always be among the choicest possessions of all who love music and especially of those who make music their main interest and study.”

“Models of coherence and lucidity, they provide the musician with examples of never tiring self-criticism in the pursuit of ideal perfection. A vivid commentary on the Composer’s life, they allow us to see a great and tragic personality both reacting to circumstance and at the same time controlling circumstance. And further, the discerning student may see in them how the personal experience of the composer broadens out into a universalised significance that speaks to and evokes response from the heart of humanity.”

“While the enlightened use of these sonatas carries with it the privilege of being admitted, if we will, into the companionship of a great mind dealing with problems of beauty in music and its perfect presentation, there exists also, in the too great concentration that may be brought to the literal side of performance, the danger of missing the marvellous spirit that lies behind, and in the music itself.”

(From the introduction to British musicologist Donald Francis Tovey’s edition of Beethoven’s Sonatas, published in 1931)

About the Performer

Pianist Eugene Gaub has performed solo and chamber music throughout the United States, in Mexico, Canada, and in musical capitals of Europe including Vienna and Salzburg. His New York debut took place at Lincoln Center in a performance of Bartók’s First Piano Concerto with the Juilliard Orchestra. The Buffalo News named his performance of Mozart’s Concerto in G Major, K. 453 with the Buffalo Philharmonic as one of the year’s best. Mr. Gaub has worked closely with many American composers, including John Adams, whose “Phrygian Gates” he was invited to perform at the 1997 National Conference of the College Music Society.

In 2004, he was awarded a grant by the Andrew Mellon Foundation, which sponsored him in a performing and teaching residency at Pomona College in Claremont California. That year, he was the artistic director and pianist for performances of Arnold Schoenberg’s Pierrot Lunaire at the University of Iowa and Grinnell College and served as resident director for the Grinnell-in-Washington program. The recipient last year of a Grinnell College Senior Faculty Research Leave, he presented the first four recitals in a three-year cycle of the Beethoven piano sonatas.

A graduate of the Juilliard School, Eugene Gaub received the Doctor of Musical Arts degree and the Performer’s Certificate from the Eastman School of Music. He is Associate Professor of Music at Grinnell College.
